

VERY UNFORTUNATE

Is the Controversy that has Arisen Over the Result of the Columbus Wheeling Bowling Match - The Stakeholder's Letter to Josephy.

Very unfortunate is the controversy that has arisen over the outcome of the inter-city match at ten-pins between the All-Wheelings and Columbus All-Stars. In vesterday's Intelligencer the request of Manager Josephy, of the Columbus club, that the stake, $300, be withheld, was printed, and further the statement that the stakeholder had paid the money to Manager Fette, of the Wheelings, at the conclusion of the last game Tuesday night, when none of the Columbus players even intimated that Wheeling had not won out. Yesterday the stakeholder sent the following letter to Manager Josephy:

WHEELING, Jan. 12, 1899. Mr. W. J. Josephy, Manager Colu-All-Stars, Columbus, Ohio.

Mr. W. J. Josephy, Manager Columbus All-Stars, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have received your telegram, in which you say, "According to correct scores Columbus hag two pins the best of it: don't pay over the money." Last evening I wired in reply that the lead of 165 pins with which your team commended by the season of the

In your telegram you do not enter into articular to show how Columbus wen by two pleas. Hoping you have found ere this that your protest is unreasonable, I remain, respectfully.

Wednesday's Columbus State Journal contained a dispatch from Wheeling, signed by its staff representative and sporting editor. Harry Needham, in which he admitted the defeat of the team here. The story was headed "By Nine Pins the Wheeling Bowlers Win the Match with Columbus team lost the match with Wheeling to-night by a margin of nine pins. * * With the games six to five in favor of Columbus and tetal pins on the series a tle, the sixth game started with determination written on each one's face. Excitement written on each one's face. Excitement was at a fever heat and until the last men rolled, the game was any-'s. A margin of nine pins separated he teams at the finish and the match cent to Wheeling."

In the face of the above admission of defeat, which was tacitly shared in by all the Columbus players and rooters, not one of whom even suggested any doubt of the result, yesterday's Columbus State Journal has the following:

There was a most unsatisfactory ending to the match games at Wheeling to the match games at Wheeling Torsday evening, inasmuch as the result was credited to the team from the West Virginia town, when it really belonged to the Columbus All-Stars, it all happened through a misunderstanding of the number of plas that Columbus had the advantage of their opponents after the first six games had been played. The result of the games as published in The State Journal gave Wheeling ten plus more than they made in the second game and this was not the official score, merely a cope taken hastily at the conclusion of the third game of the series. The boys went to Wheeling with the Idea of having 105 plus the best of the first six games, whereas the advantage according to the official score shows 115 plus. Wheeling scored 113 more pins in the last six games and each of the rightly was mere than Columbus, which rightly sames than Columbus, which rightly gives the match to the team from this city by a margin of two pins. Had this fact been known by the members of the team; no trouble would have occurred.

They certainly are aware of the number of plus they scored while in this city, as they had representatives here to act in that capacity, and any word they received from anyone ex-cepting the official scorer of the match cannot be held as official. Word was sent to the stakeholder gesterday to wait for the official figures of the entire twelve games before he paid over the sent to the stakeholder vesterday to wait for the official figures of the entire twelve games before he paid over the money, but he sent word back that, according to the telegrams he received from this city on the date of the games played here he had decided the match in favor of Wheeling. If Mr. Archer, who acted as stakeholder in the match, had waited until he received the official scores of all the games before he paid the money to either side, he would have saved a deal of unpleasantness on both sides, for as the match now stands, the victory is in the hands of the Columbus team, while the money that should accompany the victory is resting in the hands or pockets of the losers. Mr. Archer has promised to write a letter explaining his stand on the matter, and all criticism is withheld until he has a chance to set forth his views on the matter. It certainly looks very bad for the locals, as there is no chance for the mether. the locals, as there is no chance them to get their rights unless bowlers who have participated in this match and came out of it with the ney end, will prove themselves true sportsmen by not retaining what is rightfully not theirs. Mr. Archer stated in his telegram that "Collin acknowledged defeat." but as the writer was witness to Mr. Archer leaving the bowling alleys before the bowlers went away, this will hardly stand, as Herman states that he acknowledged defeat to no one. The Columbus party had all the hustling they were capable of to make the train after the games and this fact alone was one of the causes of the entanglement. ney end, will prove th

The State Journal refers to an "off clal score." There really was no officlal score for the games at Columbus on which the controversy hinges. Mr. Needham acted for the stakeholder at those games, the latter being unable to instructions to see that the official scores were forwarded to the stakeholder. Mr. Needham did telegraph the attend, and was requested in a letter of Instructions to see that the official scores were forwarded to the stakeholder. Mr. Needham did telegraph the scores to the Intelligencer, in the office of which the stakeholder is employed. In the absence of official scores, duly signed by the officials acting at Columbus, the stakeholder compared the scores sent the Intelligencer with those appearing in the State Journal, and as they were identical and unquestioned by anybody, he considered them correct and official, in that they were sent by the man who had been delegated to act for the stakeholder.

Before the evening games last Tuesday, it seems that Manuger Fette heard that one of the Columbus papers, the Dispatch, had printed the score of the second game at Columbus different from what had been printed in the State Journal and sent to the Intelligencer, and asked Mr. Needham which was the correct score. Mr. Needham according to Manuger Fette, answered that Columbus had a lead of 105 pins on its arrival at the Wheeling alleys, and that Wheeling would win if it overcame that lead in the event that games won were tired. Also according to Manuger Fette, Mr. Needham saik that the 105 score was official and correct. It was upon that basis that the games at Wheeling were rolled and upon that basis Wheeling wor by nine pins. The stakeholder could not know that a protest would be filed nearly a day after the conclusion of the last game, and had no excuse for withholding the stake after that. Could he also be expected to wait for an "official score" of games played on December 25, which had not arrived on January 10, and which the Columbus team did not even bring to Wheeling with them? Mr. Collin did in effect acknowledge the defent of his team, and all the Columbus players and sooters tacitly admitted their defeat. If they had won, would they have left the alleys without even asking for a count of pins or for the money at stake? Certainly not.

If a mistake was made in sending the scores from Columbus, it is unfortunally.

but how can it become known at this time that a mistake was really made? There is no evidence of a mistake, so far,

Umpire-Smith. Scorers-Zimmer and Balzer, BOXING.

Oscar Gardner returned home yesterday morning, accompanied by a Simth, of New York, one of his backers. The old bruise under his eye was the only visible mark of his encounter with Dave Sullvan, and that tender spot is beyond all healing as long as continues to fight every fortnight. Os-car's end of the purse netted him excar's end of the purse netted him exactly $2,495 85, although the attendance was equal, if not larger, than at the Sharkey-McCoy contest, but the price was much lower, the general admission being placed at one plunk, and ascending to $7. Fancy seats brought $20 for the big fellows' fight. Gifts from Smith and other bettors on him increased Oscar's plum to $3,000, in addition to a lot on Coney Island, valued at $600, which Smith, who won $2,000 on the fight, presented to him. Mr. Smith will be Oscar's guest until he goes to New York to fight Solly Smith.

When a boxer gets to the top he can afford to do a little dictating himself. Hence, Oscar Gardner doesn't intend going out of his class in the future going out of his class in the future-a move that shows his good judgment, for he took big chances in meeting men at the light-weight limit, 133 pounds, and trequently his opponents weighed 138. Hereafter, Oscar insists that his opponent must weigh 122 pounds or un-der, and on account of his resolve the six-round go with Tommy White, at Chicago, has been declared off. White was to weigh 133 pounds, and wouldn't met Gardner at 122, but would meet others. Another reason for Gardner dropping the match was that he is not a six-round boxer, and couldn't expect to get the decision with a man like the Chicago crack, in six rounds, at catch-weights.

Gardner's next engagement will be on February 6, at the swell Broadway A. C., New York, where the bleachers cost 33 apiece. He and Solly Smith, his old college chum, will mix it for twenty-five rounds.
